

Navigating Disruption with Wholesome Leadership

The future of the environments in which businesses operate will become even more chaotic and turbulent going forward. Potentially disruptive technologies are having a substantial impact on many different aspects of society. Taken together, they are creating an environment that is dramatically different and far more volatile than the world that came before—an environment filled with novel challenges and opportunities.

Organisations which will thrive sustainably in such a future will be the ones that deliver value to all their stakeholders. Such organisations will be characterised by a strong culture based on humanistic values and innovation.

What kind of Leaders will be able to navigate and thrive in such a disruptive environment? This will require a very different kind of leadership compared to what may have worked well in the past.

This session explores the practices of Wholesome Leadership that will facilitate a more participatory and innovative style of Leadership anchored in the context of what is happening around us today.

Key Takeaways:

Participants will be able to:

- Identify the business impact of disruptive technologies
- State what will be needed to navigate and thrive in such environments (The OODA Loop: Observe, Orient, Decide, and Act); and
- Describe how Wholesome Leadership will create such opportunities.
